Describe present and historic physical appearance.

The East Market Street Church of Christ is a rectangular two story brick building in the Neo-Classical Revival style. The cornerstone was laid on 8 October 1911 and the church was completed by June, 1912.

The facade is laid in Flemish bond brick; the sides and rear are running bond. The foundation is stone, with a terra cotta watertable. A projecting central raised pavilion with columns in antis is distinguished by a full pediment supported by brick Doric pilasters and two fluted Ionic columns with attic bases on high plinths. The plain architrave, cornice and raking box cornice of the pediment are terra cotta, and the frieze is brick. A blind brick balustrade wraps around the front and sides of the pavilion. The three bay recessed entrance portico has stained glass round-arched windows with circular tracery and terra cotta surrounds and sills. The main double door and flanking single doors also have terra cotta surrounds and entablatures. Arcaded round-arch bays flanking the portico have paired rectangular stained glass windows on the first floor, with terra cotta sills and lintels, and paired round windows with circular tracery on the second floor level. Side and rear elevations are rather plain, distinguished mainly by single and paired stained glass rectangular windows on the first floor and round-arched windows on the second floor. The roof is a shallow pitched hip with asphalt shingling.

The church's interior is arranged on the "Akron Plan" of church design. The altar is centered on the east wall, with seating and balconies in a modified semi-circle on three sides. Sunday school or classrooms on the main and balcony levels can be opened to or closed off from the main sanctuary. The original seating has been replaced by theater seats. The coved ceiling has a beamed and coffered three-section stained glass skylight. The interior is further distinguished by ceiling beams, hexagonal balcony supports, and pilasters with carved and scrolled capitals.

The church continues to maintain a high degree of integrity on both the exterior and the interior.
The East Market Street Church of Christ is significant as one of only two essentially unaltered Akron Plan churches remaining in the city where the Akron Plan was developed. It is also the earliest example of the type in Akron still in use as a church and Sunday school, and is the oldest surviving Akron Plan church in Akron that was designed specifically as a sanctuary. This church is also a notable example in the Neo-Classical Revival style of the buildings designed by Harpster and Bliss, Akron's most noteworthy and prolific architects of the early twentieth century.

The Akron plan originated with Lewis A. Miller, an inventor and manufacturer of reapers, the father-in-law of Thomas A. Edison, and the co-founder of the influential Chautauqua cultural institution at Chautauqua Lake, New York. Together with architect Jacob Snyder, Miller developed a unique design for the First Methodist Church of Akron (built 1868), with a Sunday school room at the rear and opening into the sanctuary. George W. Kramer, a well known Akron architect (who moved to New York City in 1894), adapted this plan to provide a semi-circular auditorium with a double tier of Sunday school rooms on three sides which could be closed into classrooms by sliding or folding partitions, or opened up when extra space was needed in the sanctuary. The First Methodist Church was demolished years ago, and the Akron Plan High Street Christian Church, built in 1892, burned in 1975. The Wooster Avenue Church, very similar in design to this church, was also demolished. St. Paul's Sunday School and Parish House, built in 1884 (NR 11-76), although an Akron Plan Sunday School, was not designed primarily as a sanctuary. The East Market Street Church is thus the oldest and most intact Akron Plan Church, designed and built specifically as a sanctuary and Sunday school, in the city of Akron.

This building is also a noteworthy example of a church designed by the Akron firm of Harpster and Bliss. From their association in 1907 to Bliss' death in 1925, Harpster and Bliss were the most prominent and prolific architects in Akron. Numbered among their commissions were many houses, including one for Harvey Firestone (now demolished), and major public buildings, churches, and schools in a wide variety of styles. Much of their church architecture was in the Neo-Classical Revival style, and includes the Church of Christ, Scientist (built 1915), the First Methodist Episcopal Church (First United Methodist, built 1913-14), the Temple Israel (built ca. 1917), and the East Market Street.
Church of Christ. (The Neo-Classical Revival Style was unusual in itself - most Akron plan buildings were Richardsonian Romanesque and Romanesque Revival.) The East Market Street Church embodies most of the elements that distinguish Harpster and Bliss' later notable church designs in this style. They all feature prominent raised porticos in antis, with either Ionic columns (Methodist & Christian Science) or brick piers (Temple Israel). Pedimented balustrades and three bay central doorways, flanked by single bays, are found on Temple Israel and the Christian Science Church, and round-arched windows are also used in the Christian Science and Methodist Churches. Plain friezes, second story windows aligned with the doorways, and decorative string courses are other stylistic elements shared among Harpster and Bliss' most distinguished Neo-Classical churches. The University Club (built 1917-19) was also a notable Harpster and Bliss building in this style, but has lost integrity through alterations. The Methodist Church, Christian Science church (now owned by the University of Akron), and Temple Israel have likewise all had additions or alterations. The East Market Street Church of Christ, with its prominent raised portico in antis, full pediment and balustrade, Ionic columns, brick pilasters, and terra cotta trim, is thus the earliest and most intact surviving example of Harpster and Bliss' church designs in the Neo-Classical Revival style.
