West Virginians in Akron

Michael Elliott, Public Service Assistant

The turn of the last century witnessed the emergence of the industry forever linked with the rise of Akron – rubber. The automotive industry was booming, and most of the cars that rolled off the assembly line were equipped with tires built in Akron. Unfortunately, this demand was happening at the precise time that the usual source of cheap labor – European immigrants – was curtailed due to World War I. To supply the factories with strong backs, plant managers turned to an untapped domestic source of labor to fill the production lines. That was Appalachia. Whether it was coal mining, small-scale farming or sharecropping, immigrants from Appalachia streamed into Akron where warm bodies were needed to man the machinery of the rubber shops. Between 1900 and 1910, the total population of Akron went from 42,565 to 69,082 and from 1910 to 1920, it went from 69,082 to 208,253. During the second decade just mentioned, employment in the rubber shops increased by a staggering 50,000 employees.

Presidential Visits to Akron, Part II

By Michael Elliott, Public Service Assistant

In our last issue, we explored the visits of several U.S. Presidents to the Akron area. The next 100 years would see many more campaign visits from Presidents and candidates.

Woodrow Wilson appears to be the only President of the 20th century not to have visited Akron. It is very probable he would have campaigned in the area but three weeks before the election of 1912, a deranged man critically wounded Bull Moose party candidate Teddy Roosevelt in Milwaukee, causing a worried Wilson to cancel all further appearances. Wilson’s frail constitution and very short and private post-Presidential life prevented much traveling. During the 1916 campaign, Wilson’s stand-in William Jennings Bryan made a stop here, stumping for him. The perennial runner-up Bryan was no stranger to the Akron area, having repeatedly visited the area during his own campaigns for President. On one visit, he spoke from a hastily constructed grandstand erected in front of the Buchtel Hotel at the southeast corner of Main and Mill. In terms of sheer numbers this event was rivaled only by Roosevelt’s visit in 1912.

Warren G. Harding – then U.S. Senator from Ohio - was here on April 19, 1920 speaking at the armory against American involvement in the League of Nations. Earlier in the day, he had toured the recently completed Goodyear Hall across from company headquarters on Market St. and briefly spoke there at a dedication service in front of a capacity crowd. After his sudden death in office three years later, the funeral cortège passed through Akron on its way from Washington to the tomb in Marion, Ohio. Thousands of Summit County residents lined the tracks in respect and curiosity as the funeral train proceeding slowly through the Akron area.

Calvin Coolidge made his first public appearance as President in Akron. On his way to the Harding funeral in Marion, Ohio, his special car switched locomotives at the East Exchange St. crossing. In Akron for a scant ten minutes, the President and his wife appeared on the platform of his car for just a minute or two – time enough for the photographer present to record the moment. Four years later, although not physically present, he was given the singular honor of starting the printing presses in the new Beacon Journal building on October 10, 1927. He did this by remote control, pressing an electronic “start-up” button from the White House.

Herbert Hoover made a short “whistle-stop” campaign speech of a few minutes’ duration at Union Depot on October 15, 1932. More than 10,000 people jammed the area surrounding Akron’s train station under the Market St. bridge to hear Hoover give a brief account as to why he should be reelected. Included in the multitude was young Herbert Hoover McClain, who had been born just after Hoover’s election to the Presidency. Invited up onto the platform of the President’s private car, McClain was presented to the President. Prompted to greet the President and shake his hand, the tightlipped and very nervous young man instead slightly dampened the President’s pant leg.

Franklin D. Roosevelt passed through the area in August and October of 1936 while his locomotive took on water at the N. Arlington St. (“Old Forge”) crossing. However, no one got so much as even a glimpse of the President, as security was at a fever pitch with extra railroad detectives and the Akron police keeping the general public well away. FDR returned to Akron late in the evening of October 11, 1940 when he spoke to thousands of supporters at the Union Depot. The ramps and slopes surrounding the depot and the Market St. and Perkins St. bridges were packed sardine-like with people who listened to his few remarks encouraging them to redouble their production efforts in Akron’s factories as a means of self-defense. The President also attempted to reassure his listeners regarding the world’s ongoing conflicts by offering he was “confident that in the future we shall be able to avoid being brought into war through attack by somebody else on the Americas.” At the close of his abbreviated and impromptu remarks, the train slowly pulled away from the station, the President gripping the handrail of his railcar while small boys scammed along the rails after the rapidly accelerating train.

In a much publicized visit on October 11, 1948 (coincidentally the same day the Cleveland Indians claimed their last World Series title), Harry Truman arrived at Union Depot at about 7:30 p.m. He was conducted through Akron in an open automobile to the Akron Armory. Despite Akron being his 11th stop of the day, Truman smiled and waved to all of the well-wishers lining Akron’s streets that early October evening, including my father, who was one of the many in the admiring crowd along Main St. At 9:00 pm. Truman appeared at the Akron Armory (now the site of the Ocasek office building) where he gave a speech to a wildly enthusiastic crowd and radio audience.

Dwight Eisenhower was welcomed at Harbel Manor, the home of Harvey Firestone, in the summer of 1919. At that time, he was part of the army’s “transcontinental motor train” experiment, proving that cross-country motorized mass transit was feasible. A strong proponent of motorized transport, Ike’s opinion was further reinforced by seeing the autobahn in Germany during the war. He passed through Akron again on June 8, 1964, while on the way to the Governors Conference in Cleveland. He and wife Mamie detrained at Akron’s new Union Station, and after briefly greeting the crowd, were taken by limousine to Cleveland.

John F. Kennedy visited Akron on April 4, 1959, when he gave the principal address to the Jefferson-Jackson club in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. At the time, he was simply the junior Senator from Massachusetts and remained noncommittal regarding questions about his candidacy for President. But those present for the banquet and reception given in his honor were charmed by his “easy manner and friendly smile” and were convinced he would run for President.

Lyndon Johnson was here on October 21, 1964, arriving at Akron-Canton airport and caravanning to Akron for a scheduled speech at the University of Akron. En route to the University, Johnson hopped out of his open limousine several times in downtown Akron, walking along the sidewalk and shaking the hands of surprised lunchtime office workers and shoppers. Slowly making his way to Memorial Hall on the University of Akron campus, LBJ gave a speech that proclaimed “We are not about to send American boys 9 or 10,000 miles away from home to do what Asian boys ought to be doing for themselves.” Finishing his speech at Memorial Hall, Johnson afterwards made an impromptu visit to publisher John S. Knight at the Beacon Journal.

Richard Nixon once spent a few days in Akron, taking a brief vacation here. Vice-President Nixon was here for the opening of the Soap Box Derby on August 15, 1959. While here, he was the guest of Akron Beacon Journal publisher John S. Knight, spending a total of four days relaxing and playing golf at the Portage Country Club. (The report of his round published in the paper reported that he shot an 89, highest among his foursome) As President, he was back in Akron on the evening of July 30, 1971, after touring the Pro Football Hall of fame in Canton. Nixon stayed overnight in a special suite on the fifth floor of the Akron Holiday Inn, which had to be hurriedly redesigned to accommodate the Presidential retinue. Later designated as Gallucci Hall on the campus of the University of Akron, this building has, until very recently, functioned as a student dormitory. Strong rumors persist that Nixon would make frequent trips to Akron – even while President –to play a round of golf with his good friend John S. Knight of the Beacon Journal who forbade any coverage of these clandestine visits.
Gerald Ford was here on October 14, 1965, when he spoke to the Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower-Sheraton Hotel. He was here again as a former President on October 6, 1986 and again on April 28, 2003, both times being the featured speaker at E. J. Thomas Hall at the University of Akron.

As a candidate for the nomination, Jimmy Carter made a campaign stop at the Goodrich Union Hall on Wolf Ledges Parkway on May 28, 1976.

Ronald Reagan arrived in August of 1951 to take part in the opening festivities at the Soap Box Derby. Along with ventriloquist Paul Winchell and cowboy character actor Andy Devine, Reagan took part in the celebrity “Oil Can Race.” A much-anticipated annual event, the race that year saw Reagan finish a close second to Winchell and his sidekick/co-pilot Jerry Mahoney. Forty one years later, in 1992, Reagan returned to give a speech to an invitation-only gathering at the Portage Country Club on Merriman Rd.

Cheney spoke to several hundred people before resuming their journey.

As we near the 2008 campaign season, we can look forward to visits from many more candidates seeking audiences and votes.

D. Bruce Mansfield Collection

Special Collections is honored to be chosen as the repository for papers pertaining to the personal and professional life of the late D. Bruce Mansfield. A former president of Ohio Edison, Mr. Mansfield was actively engaged in the community, serving for several years on the board of the Senior Workers’ Action Program, now known as Mature Services. A recovering alcoholic, Mr. Mansfield encouraged the social service organization to provide services to senior citizens with alcohol problems. The D. Bruce Mansfield Center at Mature Services was established for this purpose, and continues to serve clients today. A collection of Mr. Mansfield’s papers, maintained for many years at the Center, will now make its home in the Special Collections Division. We are grateful to Mature Services for donating this collection of materials to the Akron-Summit County Public Library.

Rubber Company records show that a large proportion of these new Akron residents were from the state of West Virginia. This is not surprising considering the rubber companies recruited laborers by placing want ads in the local West Virginia newspapers. Word of mouth also contributed heavily to the increased immigration from south and east of the Ohio river. So many West Virginians made the trip to Akron that it was only halfway in jest it was said the “three R’s” were taught in West Virginia schools – that is Readin’, Rightin’ and Route 21 - the primary highway to Akron from the south in those years.

After obtaining employment here, the newly transplanted found a place to live as best they could. Before the economic downturn in 1921, it was not unusual for a single male laborer to work a full shift at one plant then race to another plant to earn an additional paycheck. With housing at a premium, it was also common for these men to “hotbunk” with other laborers in the same situation but on another shift. This was usually in the southern or eastern parts of town, as those who could afford the expense, purchased property on Akron’s west side – away from the prevailing westerly winds. Once experienced, the acrid smell of burning rubber was something to be avoided if possible.

For recreation there was even a club – known as the West Virginia Society. Founded in 1916, a grand picnic was held every August usually at Akron’s Summit Beach Park and the featured speaker was frequently a politician from West Virginia. Crowds numbering upwards of 20 to 30 thousand people were not unusual. At these yearly gatherings, contests were held, including the standard beauty queen, Miss West Virginia, but also the “homeliest person” and best “husband caller” a talent requiring considerable lung capacity. Although the society holidays ceased earlier, the society itself lasted well into the 1990s.

The Great Depression dealt a severe blow to the rubber industry, and many rubber workers decided to return to their homes in West Virginia. When businesses started hiring again, during the World War II years, many returned to make aircraft parts, tires, and other defense industry goods. Still more downturns in the fortunes of our local industries saw employees retiring and many deciding to stay here, seeing Akron as home.

Special Collections houses many different materials to help you with your West Virginia heritage research. We have Akron City Directories for most years between 1871 and 2005. These directories functioned as the telephone books of a community before there were telephone books and can help fill in the blanks between census years. Vital records such as marriage records and death records are held at the county level, and we have a growing collection of these books from a variety of West Virginia counties.

Additionally, the West Virginia Division of Culture and History has created an on-line Genealogy Corner at http://www.wvculture.org/history/genealog.html which provides information about some of the collections held by the archives as well as other How To’s and histories. Many vital records are also online at http://www.wvculture.org/vrr/va_select.aspx.

New Online Resource:
Access NewspaperARCHIVE

The Library now subscribes to Access NewspaperARCHIVE, a searchable online archive of over 2,700 newspaper titles from around the world, dating as far back as the 1700s. Newspapers from Summit County are not included in the database, and the time period covered varies from publication to publication, but the database can be a wonderful time and money-saving tool for researchers accustomed to contacting out-of-town libraries to request articles.

For general information about this resource and the newspapers that it includes, you may visit www.newspaperarchive.com. To actually search the database using the Library’s subscription, visit any ASCPL location and look for the link on the “Databases & Websites” portion of the Library’s Web site.
On Exhibit

In honor of the rich multicultural heritage of Akron’s own Howard St., the Special Collections Division, in cooperation with Cascade Locks Park Association, will present a display on the second floor in front of the Popular Culture Division. This special exhibit will show images from the heyday of Howard St., when it was alive with jazz and businesses were flourishing in this neighborhood. You can catch this exhibit July through August, along with a complementary display by the Audio-Visual Services Division about the history of jazz. All this is in celebration of the annual event hosted by the Cascade Locks Park Association known as Hot Jazz on Howard St. which takes place on Saturday August 18th at the Interbelt Nite Club. To see details, visit http://www.cascadelocks.org/events.htm.

During July and August, the City of Akron will host a series of dance performances throughout Akron. Featuring regional dance companies, these performances will highlight the work of former Ohio Ballet Artistic Director Heinz Poll. In conjunction with this festival, Special Collections will offer an exhibit, Heinz Poll: a Tribute – Photographs from the Ott Gangl Collection. This exhibit, featuring photographs from the Ott Gangl Collection, may be seen at the Main Library on the second floor in the Garden Trio Corridor. For more information about the dance festival, visit the City’s website: www.ci.akron.oh.us.

The Reporter on Microfilm

Special Collections now has most issues of The Reporter newspaper on microfilm, from its first issue on October 11, 1969 through 1999 and from 2003-2004. Youngstown lawyer William Ellis, Sr. founded The Reporter to fill the void left after local African American newspapers the Informer and the Akronite ceased publication in 1960 and 1967, respectively. This weekly newspaper, now under the direction of William Jr., continues to report news, events, and issues of particular relevance to African Americans across northeastern Ohio.

SLO Genealogy Collection Now at Columbus Metro Library

By Cheri Goldner, Librarian

The genealogy collection of the State Library of Ohio (SLO) was recently moved to the Columbus Metropolitan Library (CML) and is now on the shelves and ready for use. The Genealogy, History & Travel Division at CML’s Main Library was chosen as the collection’s new home because of its hours of operation, ability to provide open access to the collection, and commitment to providing excellent customer service. The 30,000-volume collection includes census and county records, cemetery books, military rosters, how-to books, and family rosters.

As part of the agreement, CML will expand its genealogical services to embrace the concept of "Ohio, the Gateway to the West," focusing on Ohio not only as a state in itself, but also as the migratory route between the eastern and southern states and the American west in the early 19th century. This concept includes Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina.

In addition, SLO and CML have agreed to partner in offering classes for the general public, cataloging the collection, digitizing and preserving items in the collection, and assisting genealogical organizations with outreach.

CML’s Main Library is open Monday—Thursday from 9-9, Friday and Saturday from 9-6, and Sunday from 1-5. For more information, contact the library at 614.645.2ASK or visit their Web site at: http://www.columbuslibrary.org.
Gifts from the Summit County Chapter of OGS

By Judy James, Division Manager

The April meeting of the Summit County Ohio Genealogical Society Chapter was a special one. Charter members Violet Barden, Ima Gene Boyd, and Elizabeth Manuel were honored for their many years of service, and current Publications Chair, Lois Noirot, was recognized for outstanding service to the Chapter. Lois was presented with a collection of letters of appreciation and a framed proclamation from Mayor Plusquellic designating April 21, 2007 as “Lois Noirot Day.”

For Special Collections, the meeting was like Christmas in April! The Chapter presented the Library with several items including:

- Records of the Summit County Chapter of OGS: the collection includes the Chapter’s charter, meeting minutes, photographs, member lists, and other historical materials. These materials were maintained for many years by Chapter historian, Ima Gene Boyd.
- Microfilmed records:
  - Stark County Birth records, 1867-1908
  - Stark County Death records, 1867-1908
  - Portage County Birth & Death records, 1867-1908
  - Portage County Marriage records, 1808-1917
- OmniPage 15 Software for our collaborative project with the Chapter to digitize Summit County cemetery records.
- A copy of the Chapter’s new publication, Saint Vincent Cemetery Records.
- Civil War Roll Call, a handsome binder of materials commemorating the Chapter’s Civil War program at Glendale Cemetery last year, as well as genealogical information about the Civil War ancestors of Chapter members.

We are extremely grateful to the Summit County Chapter of the Ohio Genealogical Society for these most generous gifts and for their continued support of Special Collections.

2007 Akron History Trails – Get Your Passport

By Cheri Goldner, Librarian

The City of Akron and the partners of the Lock 3 Akron History Museum have teamed up to bring the Akron History Trails Project back this summer. While last year’s program focused on 1931 and the 75th anniversary of notable buildings constructed that year, the 2007 project concentrates on the city’s downtown historic monuments and markers.

An Akron History Trails booklet featuring city monuments and markers, themed history trails, and historic buildings and institutions will be available at participating institutions. Participants may then visit the sites and either have their passports stamped or, for sites that are not staffed, answer a question or complete a task in order to mark their visit.

The program is expected to kick off on July 2 at 10:30 a.m. with the dedication of the Ohio Historic Marker at the Glendale Steps. Built by the Federal Works Progress Administration over a two-year period from 1936-1937, the Glendale Steps survive as a monument to the work of stone craftsmen during the Great Depression. Spanning a 200-foot slope, the steps enable residents to descend from South Walnut Street to a city park along Glendale Avenue. The cost of the 242 sandstone steps was $22,000. Budget restraints of the time prevented the City of Akron from completing planned improvements to the park.

Details of this year’s Akron History Trails Project are still being finalized. For more information about the project and other summer events in Akron, visit the City of Akron’s website at http://www.ci.akron.oh.us/.
StoryCorps®
Comes to Cleveland

By Cheri Goldner, Librarian

StoryCorps, the national oral history project in which participants interview one another, and 90.3 FM WCPN station are bringing a StoryCorps MobileBooth to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland August 2–Aug 25, 2007. Reservations for one-hour interview sessions will be accepted starting July 19 at 10 am. For the first two weeks and starting on August 3 at 10 am. for the remainder of the stop. You can make a reservation by calling the StoryCorps reservation line at 800.850.4406 or visiting the StoryCorps web site at http://www.storycorps.net/ (Click on “Participate” and then on “Record an Interview”). A donation of at least $10 is suggested (each interview costs StoryCorps $250 to produce), but no one will be turned away.

The StoryCorps project started in 2003 and aims to instruct and inspire people to record one another's stories in sound. Modeled after a project of the Works Progress Administration (WPA) that recorded oral history interviews with everyday Americans across the country during the 1930s, StoryCorps hopes to expand upon this work and become a WPA for the 21st Century. To do this, it operates several soundproof recording studios, called StoryBooths, across the country. Currently, there are two StoryBooths in New York City, an Outpost in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and two MobileBooths—air stream trailers that serve as traveling recording studios.

In StoryCorps interviews, participants interview one another in pairs with the help of a trained facilitator in a StoryBooth. The facilitator helps participants decide which questions to ask and handles all the technical aspects of the recording. At the end of the hour-long session, participants receive a copy of their interview on CD. With participants’ permission, another copy will be added to the StoryCorps Archive in the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress, where it will be accessible for generations to come. Excerpts from selected StoryCorps interviews are broadcast on National Public Radio’s Morning Edition program on Friday mornings.

The StoryCorps visit to Cleveland is a wonderful opportunity for northeast Ohio residents to sit down with a friend, neighbor, or family member and ask him or her questions that you’ve always wanted to ask. The experience will not only leave the two of you feeling closer and understanding each other better, it will also provide you with a recording that you can listen to later and help provide a lasting record of life in northeast Ohio.
