Akron’s Union Park

By Michael Elliott, Public Service Assistant

On March 11, 1848, in his desire to “provide for the health and convenience of the inhabitants of the town of Akron,” Colonel Simon Perkins executed a deed whereby he conveyed to the city two small parcels of land “for the purpose of public squares, or grounds.” Originally a part of the town common or cow pasture, the smaller of these two donations was triangular in shape and was initially comprised of slightly less than two acres. In the terms of the deed, Perkins specified that his gift should remain perpetually fenced (likely to prevent the roaming of the aforementioned cattle) and that no structures of any kind could ever be built within the dimensions of the grounds. He also stipulated that the title could never be transferred. Failure to adhere to these directives would result in a forfeiture of the title and a reversion of the property to Perkins or his heirs. Akron’s Union Park (continued)

The city gratefully accepted the bequest and promptly enclosed the area with temporary wooden fencing. Due to the distinctive footprint of the grounds the area was initially christened “Flatiron” park until early February of 1869, when City Council officially changed the name to Union Park in a possible tribute to the newly restored Union of the post Civil War era.

In subsequent years the park underwent many developments and improvements with a major highlight being the construction of Akron High School (later Central) along the park’s southeastern edge in 1886. Indeed, the decision to construct the new school at that chosen location may well have been influenced by the proximity of the park. By this time the park had been graded and sodded with ornamental and shade trees scattered throughout its boundaries. Benches had been added and a bandstand put up for use during the extremely popular summer evening concerts provided by the City. It was also around this time that the grounds were enclosed with the existing cast iron fence bordering the park dimensions. This permanently put to rest the ongoing concern of the City authorities who had been bedeviled for years over the possibility of the property reverting to the Perkins family due to the terms of the deed not being followed.

In June of 1894, the park witnessed a further addition when an ornate fountain was installed near the northern border of the park. Included in the design was a shallow wading pool where young mothers could bring their small children for a respite from the heat on summer days. Walkways of cut stone were laid through the park with the main entrance at the corner of Mill and College Streets providing a lovely vista of the bell tower of the high school. The whole was beautifully landscaped and contained extensive and well tended flower beds creating an oasis in an otherwise drab and crowded residential area.

The decade between 1910 and 1920 was perhaps the highlight of popularity for the park. Akron was booming and the sheer number of inhabitants ensured that Union Park would be a popular local destination. Following the First World War, there was discussion of constructing a memorial hall to honor the Summit County veterans of all wars until it was rediscovered that the terms of the deed forbade any permanent building.

Over the ensuing years, the overall condition of the Union Park grounds declined. The first casualty was the much loved fountain which disappeared without fanfare. The shade trees died one by one and were not replaced. By 1958, the Beacon Journal reported that the park had become a “focal point for deviates, drunkards and other undesirables.” Clearly, something needed to be done regarding the future of the park. City officials stepped in and altered the grounds by removing the few remaining trees and stone walkways. A cinder track was constructed around the perimeter of the park allowing Central High students an outdoor area used for gym class, sports and space for the marching band to practice. Although technically still open to the public, the grounds were mostly used by Central High students for various school related activities.

So, the next time you pass by the now closed Central-Hower High School take a quick notice of the open, grassy area out front. It’s hard to imagine, but for several decades, the area was a hub of neighborhood activity. Today, Union Park is little more than a memory with the site going unused and untended. The only constant is the durable cast iron fencing kept in place by the City honoring the terms as set forth by Simon Perkins in his bequest more than 160 years ago.
Beacon Journal Indexes Online

By Cheri Goldner, Librarian

We have recently expanded our online obituary index to the Akron Beacon Journal to cover the years 1940-2007. Just visit the Special Collections Web page and click on the “Obituary Index” link along the right side of your screen.

These obituary indexes are in Adobe’s Portable Document Format (PDF). While some of the indexes were typed by Special Collections staff members and are fully searchable, others are scanned versions of our print obituary indexes. The digital images of the scanned volumes were subjected to an optical character recognition (OCR) process to make each searchable, but because the originals are in some cases old and the text faded, the OCR process might not be as effective. For this reason, you may not be able to find a name using the search box provided on the main obituary Web page or the “find” option within an individual document. You may have to browse the volume(s) to find the entry in which you are interested, just as you would if you were using our obituary books here at the library.

The subject indexes to the Akron Beacon Journal for the years 1841-1939 will also soon be available on our Web site. These indexes will be in PDF as well but, due to the condition of the originals, they have not been subjected to OCR. Bookmarks have been provided to assist researchers in finding entries of genealogical interest, such as births, deaths and marriages. Under each of these headings, you will find an alphabetical list of personal names. Please note that the list under the “deaths” heading does not include suicides, murders, accidents or other deaths by violence. Articles regarding such deaths are indexed under the person’s name. Likewise, divorces are usually found under the names of the parties involved.

Other entries may be found by browsing through the volumes, which are in alphabetical order by subject. Instructions for using the indexes appear at the beginning of each volume, and most volumes (those after 1871) also include a key to abbreviations. For easier reading of these indexes, be sure to use the magnification options and scroll bars in Adobe Reader.

At this time, there is still no general index to the Beacon for the years 1940-1983. The only indexes for this time period are our obituary indexes, a biographical card file that covers roughly 1940-2000 (that includes citations for the Akron Times Press and Cleveland Plain Dealer as well), and a card file index for Parade Magazine, 1979-1999 and Lifestyle and Beacon Magazine, 1979-1988.

We hope that making these indexes available online will make Akron Beacon Journal research much easier. Researchers who cannot visit the Library in order to access the Akron Beacon Journal on microfilm may request copies of newspaper articles using our correspondence service. Please limit each request to five items and submit only two requests per month. For those needing a large number of copies or more extensive newspaper research, Special Collections maintains a list of researchers for hire that we can mail or email upon request.

High School Yearbooks

One of our most popular collections is our Summit County High School Yearbooks. Whether it is to plan a reunion or jog a memory, many people ask to see a variety of yearbooks. While our collection includes approximately 40 titles and more than 200 volumes, it is still far from complete.

Many of these books are no longer available for purchase, so to fill in the blanks in our holdings, we are seeking donations. Some of the books we need are listed below.

East High School – any years prior to 1961
Mogadore High School – 1981-1988
North High School – 1941-1965

If you own any of these books and are willing to donate them to us, please contact the Special Collections Division of the Akron-Summit County Public Library at 330.643.9030 or speccollections@akronlibrary.org.
Henry R. Baldwin Records

By Cheri Goldner, Librarian

Special Collections has added a copy of the Henry R. Baldwin Genealogical Records on microfiche to our collection. Baldwin (1867-1918) was a genealogist and registrar of his local chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution. He was interested in tracing the lineage of possible SAR members and spent his retirement years traveling around northeast Ohio and western Pennsylvania by bicycle or hired horse and buggy to interview residents, do research at court houses and copy cemetery records.

Baldwin recorded 67 volumes of data. The first seven volumes include cemetery inscriptions from Ashtabula, Columbiana, Geauga, Mahoning, Portage, and Trumbull counties in Ohio and from Lawrence County in Pennsylvania. Readings from one Cuyahoga County cemetery (Old Erie Street Cemetery) are also included. The remaining volumes contain miscellaneous genealogical information Baldwin gathered from war, church, court and personal records and covers additional counties.

Mr. Baldwin did the research for these records himself. Errors are possible due to illegible tombstone inscriptions or original records used by Baldwin, as well as to the transcription process when some of the handwritten records were typed by staff at the Public Library of Youngstown and Mahoning County (PLYMC).

PLYMC staff prepared an eight-volume annotated name index to these records, a list of all cemeteries included in volumes 1-7, and a key to abbreviations. Special Collections has copies of each of these resources to aid in the use of the collection. The index is easy to use, and the handwritten portions of the records are quite legible. However, the particular sources of the information Baldwin recorded are not always clearly noted. Still, the collection can be useful in placing an ancestor in a certain area and helping researchers determine where to look for more records. Additional copies of the Baldwin records are held at PLYMC and at the Western Reserve Historical Society.

Online Books Collection

If you haven’t visited our Online Books Collection, www.akronlibrary.org/internetresources/sc/OnlineBooks/onlinebks.html, you are missing some of our hidden treasures. There are many books in our collection that are not restricted by copyright laws, thereby permitting us to scan them for access from our website. Because they are scanned with OCR (optical character recognition) software, they are searchable by any word that appears in the text. While this technology isn’t perfect it can be helpful.

We are especially pleased that Dr. Shirla McClain’s The Contributions of Blacks in Akron 1825-1975 is among the books available. Dr. McClain’s Doctoral dissertation is the most comprehensive history of African Americans in Akron. Other titles include The Jewish Criterion, 1919, and West Hill Sketchbook. Be sure to check back often, as we will continue to add titles. These books are PDF files and viewing them requires the free Adobe Acrobat Reader.
Late Night at the Library

Join the Special Collections Staff and the Summit County Chapter of the Ohio Genealogical Society for an evening of genealogy research. On Friday, September 19, the Library will close at its regular time of 6:00 pm but will re-open for genealogists from 6:30 to 10:30 pm. Mingle with fellow researchers as you uncover the details of your ancestry. Refreshments will be provided and parking is free in the High Street & E. Market deck if you enter it after 6:00 pm. Printing and copies from microfilm will also be free. For more information, contact Special Collections at 330.643.9030 or specollections@akronlibrary.org.

Akron’s Greek Heritage

By Mary Plazo, Librarian

When we think of Greeks in Akron, we mostly think of the delicious food they’ve brought to the city: Nick Anthe’s, the Western Fruit Basket, Temo’s Candy, and many others. You may even be familiar with some of the talented entertainers with Greek heritage from our area, like pianist Nicolas Constantinidis, or famous actress Melina Kanakaredes from the television show CSI: NY, whose family happens to own Temo’s Candy Company in Akron. Even if these few examples come to mind, it shows how much Greek Americans have influenced our local culture.

The United States census shows Greeks coming in larger numbers to Ohio around 1880. The largest growth in the Greek population in Akron came after World War I, between 1910 and 1920. Federal population schedules, show a growth from around 56 in 1910 to 1,626 by 1920. From 1920, the heaviest populations of native Greeks lived in Cuyahoga, Mahoning, Stark, and Summit Counties.

As was the case for many who immigrated to Summit County, the rubber factories were one reason for Greeks emigrating to Akron. Other industries also attracted immigrant workers - the census shows a large population working in the match factories in Barberton, Ohio. Many of the other occupations listed for these early Greek immigrants were laborer, salesman in confectionaries, shoe shiners, tailors, peanut vendors, and fruit salesman.

One of the first Greeks to settle in Akron was Nick Laskaris. Mr. Laskaris was an active business man in the community who moved to Akron from New York in 1880 and served in the Spanish American War. He owned a wholesale confectionary establishment on Howard St. in Akron. He was also the first Fruit Commissioner in Summit County.

Nick Laskaris was born in Athens, Greece in 1853. He was a successful Akron businessman and the first Summit County Fruit Commissioner. He died in 1912.

The first real mention of the local Greek population was in the Akron Beacon Journal in October of 1912, during the First Balkan War. “Twenty-five Greeks left Akron to respond to their country’s call to arms as many Albanians will also depart to join the Sultan’s legions.” The Greek armies of Thessaly under the Crown Prince Constantine successfully helped the Balkan League defeat the Ottoman opposition and liberate many of the islands that were still under the rule of the Ottoman Empire at that time.

During World War I, there was some dissent within the different Greek factions that existed in Akron. In an article from the Beacon Journal in August of 1917, one Greek American citizen was quoted as saying, “Hundreds of Greeks in Akron feel unable to sympathize with those powers who deprived the unhappy nation of its beloved ruler, King Constantine, and forced the people into the war against their will… [but] as far as America is concerned, we are loyal and anxious to avoid anything to embarrass this country in the present crisis.”

The Greeks in Akron also formed several organizations to celebrate their own progress and interests in the community. In 1927 the Greek-American Progressive Association was founded. In an article in the Akron Beacon Journal featuring founding members, the Association’s purpose was “to increase friendship among Greek-Americans and to bring an understanding and sympathy of American ideals to her foreign born citizens and residents.”

By the late 1930s, there were several Greek organizations in the Akron community, including the Ahepa Lodge, the Greek American Progressive Association, the Hellenic Business Men’s Association, and the Arcadian Brotherhood. At this time, there were around 3,000 Greeks in Akron, most of whom were not working in the rubber factories but owned independent businesses and worked as merchants, confectioners, restaurant owners, mechanics, electricians, doctors, dentists and lawyers.

After World War II and as time went on in Akron, many small businesses were closed. Many unique ethnic specialty merchants could not stand up to larger franchises that were moving in during the 1950s, 60s and 70s. A few businesses remained strong and became more sophisticated, such as Nick Anthe’s, which is still known for its fine dining, but unfortunately, many of the smaller establishments owned by Greek Americans have closed and become lost with time.

Native language was also a strong tie that bound members of the community together and led to the establishment of churches that would represent their religion from the native country. Looking at the history of the first churches created in Akron, there were eight Eastern Orthodox churches, one of which was Greek. Five of the original eight churches were established between 1909 and 1919. Two denominations of Greek churches were established in our area by the Greeks – Greek Catholic and Greek Orthodox. Orthodoxy in Akron largely corresponds with the boom of the rubber industry and World War I.

Several Eastern Orthodox churches still exist in Akron, one of the most prominent being the Greek Orthodox Church of the Annunciation on S. Union St., which was dedicated on Nov. 16, 1930. This is where many Greek American events are still held today, such as the annual Greek festival in Akron. Special Collections holds a very informative history of the Greek Orthodox Church of the Annunciation, Golden Anniversary 1917-1967. This book has a wonderful introduction that talks in depth about the first Greeks who came to this country and about the lives of those who first began to settle in Akron, Ohio. We also have a cookbook of recipes collected by the Annunciation Greek Orthodox Church called Treasures From Our Hope Chest with many wonderful Greek recipes. Don’t forget about the annual Greek Festival in Akron coming up on September 18th, 19th, and 20th at the Annunciation Greek Orthodox Church in Akron.

Fortunately today we still have a few reminders in our city of the wonderful culture that those early immigrants from Greece brought and shared with us. We should remember to enjoy those special places that are still with us and that can provide us with a connection to the heritage brought by so many when they came to the land of opportunity.
John F. Seiberling
Photograph Collection

In addition to his many accomplishments as United States congressman, conservationist, and law school professor, John Seiberling was an avid photographer. Rarely without a camera, Mr. Seiberling took thousands of photographs during his personal and official travels. It has been said that many of his beautiful nature and landscape photos were influential in swaying other legislators to vote for conservation issues that he supported.

Special Collections is honored to have been chosen by Mr. Seiberling and his family as the repository for these remarkable photographs. The collection includes photographs of many natural areas in the United States, including the Cuyahoga Valley prior to its designation as a National Recreation Area. Hundreds of photos he took for the Alaska Lands Act of 1980, which he helped craft, are also included in the collection.

Mr. Seiberling’s official papers are held by Archival Services at the University of Akron. An inventory of the collection may be viewed on their website: http://www3.uakron.edu/ul/archives/findingaids/johnseiberling.htm.

Although Mr. Seiberling passed away on August 2, the community is fortunate that his legacy will be preserved in his hometown of Akron.

Summit Memory Update

The Summit Memory Project welcomes the Barberton Public Library (BPL) as its newest partner. BPL contributed the O.C. Barber Mansion Collection. The construction of Ohio Columbus Barber's large estate, which began in 1909, made local and national headlines and was described in the New York Times as the "finest mansion between New York and Chicago." The Barber Mansion, as it is commonly known, stood in Barberton from 1909 until its demolition in 1965. Akron Remembers 1968

By Cheri Goldner, Librarian

It is the 40th anniversary of this pivotal year in history, which included important local, national and international events. There was chaos at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago. George Wallace, Hubert Humphrey and Richard Nixon all visited Akron during the presidential campaign. There were civil rights demonstrations, and urban unrest hit the nation’s cities, including Akron’s Wooster Avenue neighborhood. Both Martin Luther King, Jr., and Robert Kennedy were assassinated. Student demonstrations and anti-Vietnam War protests erupted across the nation and in many parts of the world, with local activists in Akron and surrounding communities. The environmental movement and women’s movement gathered momentum as well. Meanwhile, the Counterculture was in full swing, with psychedelic music, bell-bottoms, sandals and tie-dye in fashion. The Blossom Music Center opened that year, hosting three concerts by the Cleveland Orchestra as well as shows by Arlo Guthrie, Judy Collins, the Association, Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass, and Ravi Shankar.

To commemorate this significant year in history, the Akron-Summit County Public Library and Dr. Gregory Wilson of The University of Akron’s Department of History, with the cooperation of the City of Akron and Lock 3 Live!, have undertaken an oral history project called The Times They Were A-Changin’: Akron Remembers 1968. Staff from the Library and the Department of History collected memories from key individuals and the general public over the summer. Work on the project continues into the fall, with UA history students conducting additional interviews and assisting with an exhibit to be opened at the Lock 3 Akron History Museum in November, just in time for the winter activities downtown.

Be sure to stop in at the museum during HolidayFest and view the exhibit. If you have stories that you’d like to contribute, contact Special Collections.
Summit County Additions to the National Register of Historic Places

By Jane Gramlich, Librarian

Over the past year, four Summit County properties have been added to the National Register of Historic Places, the most for any single year since 2002, when nine properties were added. Three of these additions are within Akron’s city limits, so if you’re participating in Akron History Trails this year by visiting the city’s neighborhoods, be sure to take a look at them!

First National Bank Tower, 106 S. Main St., downtown: The tallest building in Akron dominates its skyline, visible from many of the city’s outlying neighborhoods. Constructed in 1931 in the Art Deco style, it has been known by several names, including the First Central Trust Building, First National Tower, and now FirstMerit Tower. For some wonderful postcard views of this building, check out Summit Memory at www.summitmemory.org and do an advanced search for the exact phrase “First National Tower.”

Rhodes and Watters Apartment Buildings, 608-614 W. Market St. and 16 Rhodes Ave. near Highland Square: These buildings are examples of apartment housing commonly built during Akron’s industrial boom years of the 1910s and 20s, using popular architectural styles of the time such as Craftsman, Tudor Revival, and the Commercial style.

Cole Avenue Housing Project Historic District, 744 Colette Dr., between Cole Ave. and E. Archwood Ave. northeast of Firestone Park: This development, constructed in 1941, resulted from efforts to secure public housing for defense workers during World War II and subsequently served as housing for veterans. It won approval for the Register in part because it has not undergone major renovations, as many similar federal housing projects of that time have.

Levi J. Hartong House and Farm, 6521 Mt. Pleasant Rd., Green: Now called Southgate Farm, this 1839-1850 farmstead has been well preserved and includes 197 acres with a farmhouse in the Italianate and Eastlake styles, an 1883 barn, and a family cemetery. It is the first property in Green to be included in the National Register.

If you’re interested in finding out more about historic Ohio properties recently added to the National Register, check out the Ohio Historical Society’s newsletter, Echoes, which runs regular updates. To see a list of current Ohio properties on the Register, visit the OHS National Register http://ohsweb.ohiohistory.org/ohpo/nr/index.aspx. Bits & Bygones

Don't let the young folks get into the habit of seeking amusement outside of their own homes. It's so easy to give them the best of amusements—clean, hearty, wholesome fun—in their own homes by means of an Edison Phonograph. It sings the songs they like to hear, gives them the monologues of clever comedians, plays the music they are fond of and renders waltzes, and two-steps that set their feet a-tripping.
